Patricia Van Doren is a member of the firm's Health Care Practice Area and Nonprofit Organizations Practice Area. Trisha graduated second in her class from the University of Connecticut School of Law and Phi Beta Kappa from Dartmouth College where she studied philosophy. Prior to law school, Trisha served as an AmeriCorps member in Hartford, Connecticut, where she taught public health to underserved middle and high school students. Trisha grew up locally and attended West Hartford Public Schools and Kingswood Oxford.

In her counsel to health and human services providers and organizations (e.g., physicians, physician practices, hospitals, behavioral health organizations, and home health and hospice care), Trish performs in-depth research and analysis on state and federal regulatory issues relating to health care entities and tax exempt organizations, prepares sophisticated transactional and corporate documents, and assists in developing practical negotiation strategies in relation to commercial disputes, white collar investigations, and matters before state agencies.
